The impulse to create this album was an idea of homunculus and bothering me questions: How such a being would perceive the world? What the asylum for homunculus would look like? As always in case of my recordings, places, the states of limbo and passivities are playing an important role.

"Handmade Man" is a kind of concept album connected with homunculus, but apart from the literal meaning it is possible to interpret it in many different ways. It could be about searching of the refuge in nature, or about human stupidity, greed and fanaticism.

Musician and graphic designer, playing with Brasil and The Gallowbrothers Band (formerly One Inch of Shadow) and solo.

He works for Cat|Sun, MonotypeRec labels and M|| magazine.

He prefers analog electronics, prepared trumpet and guitar as well as field recordings. All of Mirt's recordings are made without use of computer, with edits on analog tape only. This way excludes the wide interference in recorded material. It causes the greater concentration on work.
